Monthly Market Commentary

First, please let us take this opportunity to wish all NAVF investors a happy new year - let's hope it is a better one for markets overall than 2022!

In December a lot of recent gains in markets around the world were given back, one example being the Nikkei index which gave up 7.6% over the month. By contrast NAVF's net asset value was up 3.89%. Gratifying though this is, the major contributor to our performance was the beginning of the much anticipated reversal of the Yen's over-valuation compared to the US$ and, in our case, sterling. Pleasingly, this has continued into the first few trading days of the new year.

The portfolio was, for the most part, moribund for the month, with most stocks recording small single-digit declines. The worst performer was Intage Holdings once again, with a fall of over 10%. By contrast, Japan Securities Finance (up 12.5%) and T&K Toka (up 18.4%) were our star performers.

We expect the Yen to keep going - it has a lot of room to make up. Regrettably, so does the Fund's share price, where the discount to NAV has widened again. The fundamentals remain solid, so we remain positive

Important notice

Nippon Active Value Fund (“NAVF”) is an investment trust, listed on the London Stock Exchange in the United Kingdom, and advised by Rising Sun Management Limited. The value of its shares, and any income from them, can fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount invested.

The specific risks associated with the NAVF include:

NAVF invests in overseas securities. Changes in the rates of exchange may also cause the value of your investment (and any income it may pay) to go down or up.

NAVF can borrow money to make further investments (sometimes known as “gearing” or “leverage”). The risk is that when this money is repaid by NAVF, the value of the investments may not be enough to cover the borrowing and interest costs, and NAVF will make a loss. If NAVF’s investments fall in value, any invested borrowings will increase the amount of this loss.

NAVF can buy back its own shares. The risks from borrowing, referred to above, are increased when a trust buys back its own shares.

Market values for securities which have become difficult to trade may not be readily available and there can be no assurance that any value assigned to such securities will accurately reflect the price NAVF might receive upon their sale.

NAVF can make use of derivatives which may impact on its performance.

Investment in smaller companies is generally considered higher risk as changes in their share prices may be greater and the shares may be harder to sell. Smaller companies may do less well in periods of unfavourable economic conditions.

NAVF’s exposure to a single market and currency may increase risk.

The aim of NAVF is to achieve capital growth. It does not target a specific yield and might not pay a dividend every year.

NAVF is listed on the London Stock Exchange and is not authorised or regulated by the Financial Conduct Authority.
